

Tony C. Dill

COL (USA, Retired)

Regional Operations Manager and Security Consultant

Tony Dill leads ESi's Security Services and Defense Industry Support Teams. He specializes in high-risk training management and complex problem solving. He has participated in accident investigations within Airborne and Special Operations units involving parachutes, firearms, transportation, and explosives. He has held numerous roles in the U.S. military, including Chief of Staff for the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School, State Inspector General for the Georgia Department of Defense, and Commander of the Golden Knights parachute team.

A retired Green Beret, Mr. Dill has broad experience that includes security assessments, implementation of protection protocols, and facilities/personnel management for large-scale initiatives designed to improve operations and security at work sites, oil refineries, and small military cities abroad. Mr. Dill has led mission-critical response efforts, including natural disasters, combat search and rescue operations, hostage rescue planning, personal security detachments, site security, and convoy operations.

Mr. Dill has hands-on experience in aviation management and operations. As Battalion Commander, he was responsible for a detachment of four medium transport aircraft and provided direct oversight of aircraft maintenance, budgets, flight operations, parachute operations, training, and risk assessments in accordance with FAA and Department of Defense regulations.

Mr. Dill has consulted with defense clients on ballistic and blast safety, product development, testing and evaluation, and ISO-9000 compliance. He has provided firearm training and is well-versed in their safety and performance, including tactical training, maintenance, readiness, evaluation, and risk assessment. His expertise includes handguns, tactical shotguns, submachine guns, military rifles, mortars, and anti-armor rockets.
